The Grate Booke

In 1603-1605-1609 or 1616.

"The Grate Booke," as it is called, was printed in England in 1603-1616 in the old type and quaint spelling of that period, contains 500 leaves of heavy English parchment. It was brought to America by our immigrant ancestor, JOHN CORY, who landed at or near Boston, about twenty years after the coming of the Mayflower. The sacred book, age-yellow, treasured as an heirloom through nine generations, is now in the keeping of William Smith Cory (1913), near Darlington, Pennsylvania. It was through the efforts and at the great expense of James Enos Cory, of Shelby, Ohio, who traced its whereabouts.

The Origin

The Corys are said to be of Pict, or Scandinavian origin, deriving their name from Cori, a Roman fort at Anandale in the Shire of Dumfries, Scotland.

We also find "Karre" in Holingshed's copy of the Roll of Battle Abbey in the reign of William, the Conqueror of England. It indicates that the family is an ancient one, whatever its origin.

The word Corrie or Cori is Gaelic, signifies a bowl-shaped hollow on a hillside, in which game usually lies. Though spelled originally Corrie, in Scotland, it has since met with many changes, viz: Cori, Corie, Curie, Currie, Korrie, Karre, Korry, Corry, Corye, etc. These names are mentioned in Scottish and English Records and in the various Visitations of England.

Over in Ireland a Corrie clan is believed to have been branched off from Scotland, as two Ulster manors of Finagh, in the county of Tyrone and Coole, otherwise manor Atkinson, in the county of Fermanagh are mentioned.

Here in America, it is generally supposed that the name was first spelled Cory, changed at an early date to Corey, following in this, the example of many of the Puritans, who on leaving England during the Protectorate of Cromwell, altered the orthography of their names, possibly to escape identity in case of pursuit, into this country.

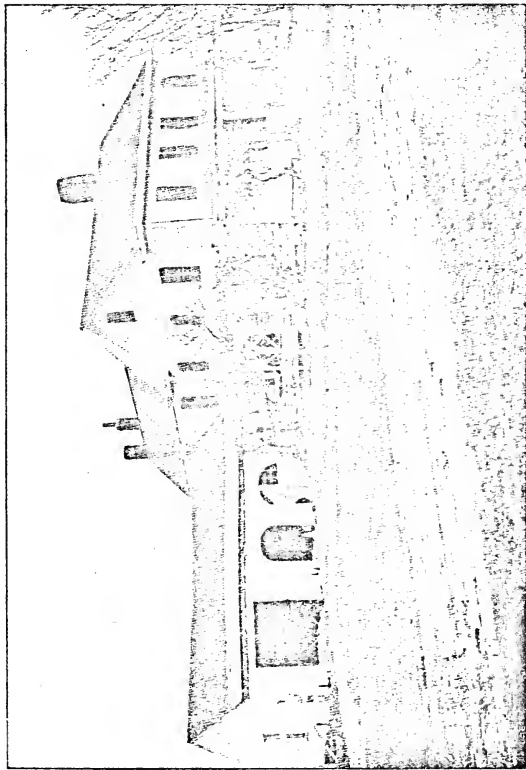

JOHN CORY, our immigrant ancestor, may have felt the urgency of this inasmuch as his father, (as several have claimed) was a prominent man in Norfolk, England who had been Knighted by Charles I. In absence of proofs, it can be said without question as to how his ancestors spelled the name Cory.

It is said possibly all the early Corys in this country sprang from three of the four men bearing the name, who came to America, 1640-50.

Giles Cory the "martyr" settled in Salem, Massachusetts, left no descendants; Thomas Cory settled in Chelmsford, Mass.; William Cory in Portsmouth, Rhode Island, and John Cory, called of "Southold," lived, it is supposed for a short time in Massachusetts and then went to New Haven, Conn. It is not known if these four men were related.

In September, 1640, a party of twelve men from Connecticut under the leadership of Rev. John Yorges, of Southwold (Suffolk), England, crossed over to Long Island and found the town of Southold, and of this body of the men, was John Cory. He is called in the records a Quaker, but he must have been at first a Presbyterian or Congregationalist, for he was one of the founders of the first Presbyterian church of Southold, 1640. (Revised from Dickinson's Cory Family.)

The Old Tory House

The Old Cory House

It stands on the original farm of John Cory, the immigrant, just a short distance east of Southold, Long Island, near the sound, built by David Cory, grandson of John Cory, when David was sheriff of Suffolk County between 1730 and 1733. The farm was occupied by John Cory at least as early as 1645 and until his death in 1685. The following quotation from a document attached to a scattered timber in the museum of the Long Island Historical Society at Brooklyn, refers to this house:

"On a Sabbath day in June, 1814, a British sloop of war, the 'Sylph,' and ten other vessels, came from their anchorage in Gardner Bay into Long Island sound, stopping opposite the house now occupied by Deacon Abraham Mulford, located near the shore three miles east of Southold village, for the purpose of destroying a vessel which carried a torpedo screwed into the ship's bottom, to be exploded by clockwork, and which, after annoying them greatly, had come up to that place for safety. On this Sabbath morning the family had gone to church at Southold, leaving their home in charge of a slave named Cuff. The British fired a few shots at the house, and Cuff fled to the hay stack for refuge. A 32-pound ball went through the second story, perforating in its course this identical piece of timber. A year later the 'Sylph' was wrecked on the Southold beach losing 106 out of the crew of 111. A quantity of rigging, tackles, etc., was saved. Mulford claimed damages for sale of these articles which was allowed by the government."

The Cory Family

(From Harriet Cory Dickinson's with Revisions)

JOHN CORY, is first mentioned in the "Town of Southampton, L. I." March 7, 1644, as a whale commissioner, for his district. He received a grant of land the following day.

The date of his birth is not recorded, nor positively known. Neither is it known in what part of the British Isles his immediate forefathers dwelt, though generally believed to have been in England. The date of birth of his eldest son, John, is recorded as 1639, and it has been assumed the birth of his father was 20 or 21 years earlier, which would make John's birth about 1618 or 1619.

It is known that he was a resident of Southold, L. I., in 1649, as he and his wife Ann or Hannah, witnessed a deed on the 8th of October. In 1659 Southold belonged to the New Haven colony. In May of that year, John refused to take the oath of allegiance but finally he did in the same month of the following year to the satisfaction of "Ye Corte" that he was no traitor and concealing no treachery. "Goodman" Cory was made Freeman of Connecticut in 1662. He seems to have been a man of considerable means, for that time, as he owned several house lots in Southold and Huntington. He died at Hashamomack, L. I., in 1685.

JOHN CORY II was born probably in England as early as 1638-39. He lived for a time in Southold, L. I., but went to Huntington with his father as early as 1659, where he bought a home lot there July 7, 1663, and was granted land in 1666, 1668, 1681 and 1682. He was at one time owner of No. 9 of the 10 farms of Huntington, and later owned No. 10 also. He was a Quaker like his father and a man of considerable importance in Huntington:—Recorder, Town Clerk and Arbitrator. He married at Huntington, December 16, 1667, Mary Cornish, probably a daughter of Thomas Cornish, of New Town, L. I., and Mary Stone, his wife, of Gloucester, Massachusetts.

John Cory's death is recorded as 1686-87, as the inventory of his estate is dated January 25, 1687. His widow married for the second time and survived both husbands, for a deed of her son, John Cory, she is mentioned April 9, 1696, as then living.

Elizabethtown was at that time one of the most important seaports on the coast. John Cory was one of the "Memorialists" (founders) of the town. The Reminiscences

The first eleven years of their married life was spent at Morristown, New Jersey. They then returned to the old Mulford home at Hanover Neck, where they had the care of her mother until her death. They then moved to Paterson, N. J., where they resided until James' death. Aunt Susan then went to live with her daughter, Carrie, until her death and then she lived with her other daughter, Martha, at Orange, New Jersey. She passed away in her ninety-seventh year. Her's was a living monument of a temperate and well ordered life, bearing fewer marks of age than many of lesser years:—
 A. E. (M) K.

As a young boy, I always regarded Grandfather Cory with awe; he was not given to coddling youngsters. I looked upon him as the very acme of truth, in word and in all his actions. There certainly was no shadow of hypocrisy in his make-up; he was strictly honest in all he said and did. His word was as good as his bond. He was never given to joking, always serious and in dead earnest, and constantly at hard work. I never heard of his going away on a vacation. * * * *

Grandmother was possessed of most of the same characteristics, only she was more affectionate and showed it. She was the smallest eater I ever knew, and the only one of my relatives that I never heard of being confined to bed with sickness. It was due to her careful diet, I believe. * * * —W. F. C.

While living on the farm at Hanover, Grandmother had risen very early one morning in order to finish some sewing for the family. As she sat at her task before the usual duties of the day began, Grandfather came through the room on his way to attend to the stock: he opened an outside door to step out, when she heard him exclaim which hurried her to the door. Together they watched the most wonderful sight they ever beheld—the “shower of stars” or meteors. It must have occurred in the early part of their married life.—G. M. (G.) C.

James Cory was evidently a very systematic man and for years kept a diary, noting the weather and other points of interest for every day in the year covering quite a length of years. I understand from his diary, as he was a carpenter by trade, he worked on many of the county bridges and also at the Bergen Tunnel, the first tunnel cut through to Bergen Hill, near Jersey City, New Jersey, for the use of the Lackawanna and Erie Railroads. The diary mentions marriages and births of his children and grandchildren. S. C. S.

ARMS OF CORY—Sable, on a chevron, between three griffins' heads, erased or as many estioles, gules.

CREST—Out of a ducal coronet, a griffin's head between two wings or, each wing charged with three estioles, in pale, gules.

MOTTO—"Forti Tene Manu" (hold with a firm hand.)

These arms, granted to Sir John Cory of "Bramerton Hall," Norwich, England, in 1612, by James I and confirmed to his son, Sir Thomas Cory, of "Bramerton Hall" by Charles I in 1637.

NOTE:—There was an old print of the Coat-armor copied from an engraving on pitcher once owned by Mr. Corrie, of Sag Harbor, L. I., who brought it from London in 1799.

Bramerton is situated four miles southeast from Norwich in the shire of Norfolk, England. The name was said to signify "Brad-mer-Town" (Broad-mer-Town) to which Broad-mere belongs a swan mark to this day, and at the time of the Conquest the "mere" was four furlongs long and two and one-half broad. Nearby is the old Church of St. Peter's, built before the Conquest. In this church may be seen many tombs and brasses to the Corys, accompanied by the Cory Arms and Crest, "A demi-griffin, or, issuant from a ducal coronet, proper."

If it is possible that our John Cory was of high family, it is unlikely he used coat-armor even if entitled to it as he is said to have been a Quaker.

THE AXTELL FAMILY

(From S. J. Axtell's and E. S. Axtell's)

The earliest appearance of the name Axtell dates back to the year 1535. In that year, the "bon hommes" of a monastery of the Augustinian order in Gatesden, Hertfordshire, England, made over their property to Henry the Eighth, and among the names signed to the deed was that of John Axstyle.

The name is spelled in the old records in several different ways—as Ackstyle, Axtel, Extil, Extell and Extel. Axtell is a comparatively modern spelling of the word.

The registration of baptisms and deaths in the parish churches of England began about 1538. At St. Peter's Church, Berkhamstead, a town in Hertfordshire, there is a record of the baptism of John Axtell, son of John, in 1539, and of William, son of John, in 1541. Five other entries of Axtells appear before 1614.

It appears there were two William Axtells rearing families in Berkhamstead between 1614 and 1628. One, perhaps, was the William, who was a burgess in 1628 and common clerk in 1639, and whose son was THOMAS, the progenitor of the family in the United States. There was a son, Daniel, probably a brother of Thomas. He took an active part against the government of King Charles I, and during the king's trial held an office in the Parliament that condemned him to death. He was also a Colonel in Cromwell's army. After the restoration of Charles II, in 1660, Daniel was beheaded.

THOMAS AXTELL was born and baptized in Berkhamstead January 26, 1619. Soon after the birth of the second child in 1641, the little family appeared in Sudbury, Massachusetts. Thomas died in 1646 and was buried August 1st of that year.

HENRY AXTELL I, baptized in St. Peter's Church, Berkhamstead, England, October 15, 1641; took land in the new town of Marlboro, bordering on the town of Sudbury, in 1660. He married Hannah Merriam, June 14, 1665. He was killed in the Wadsworth Indian massacre April 21, 1676. His widow married Will Taylor July 5, 1677.

DANIEL AXTELL, born at Marlboro, November 4, 1673, and died January, 1735. In 1695 Elder William Pratt organized a church in Dorchester, Massachusetts and soon after went to South Carolina to plant his church there as a missionary colony. In his diary, he records a very hospitable reception by Lady Axtell, the widow of Landgrave Daniel Axtell, who went from England to South Carolina about 1680. Probably Daniel Axtell of Massachusetts accompanied Mr. Pratt on one of his earlier voyages to South Carolina. May 12, 1702, he married Thankful, daughter of Elder Pratt, and lived in South Carolina until about 1707 when he returned to Massachusetts and became a large land holder in Berkley, then a part of Dighton and Taunton. A release, dated March 16, 1703, from Daniel Axtell of Carolina, county of Bartley, on Ashley river, made out in favor of his brother, Thomas of Massachusetts, establishes the relationship. A clause in Lady Axtell's will leaving property to her "Kinsman Daniel Axtell in New England" shows a relationship there. It is doubtful that the land-grave was the son of the regicide since the land-grave had a daughter of age in 1678 as appears from his will made that year in England.

HENRY AXTELL II, born at Berkley, Massachusetts, June 24, 1715. He mastered the blacksmith's trade and in 1737 married Jemima Leonard, of Taunton, Massachusetts, a girl some years younger than himself. After the birth of their second child, Henry took his family, accompanied his father-in-law in their emigration to the wilderness of New Jersey. They located in Morris county, that part which nine years later (1749) was organized into a township and called Mendham. The place where they located was about two miles southeast of the present village of Mendham. At this time, Jemima was a young woman and quite handsome. The story runs thus: on their journey they arrived at Elizabethtown, in Essex County, New Jersey, and put up at a tavern. While the men were taking care of their teams, the landlord's son, who had been smitten by Jemima's beauty, asked her for the pleasure of her company that evening. She told him to "wait for her answer until her husband came in, when she would see what he had to say about it." The feelings of the young man cannot be described.

Henry, the blacksmith, continued to work at his trade until 1743 or '54, when he died aged 38 years, leaving a widow and six children. Jemima afterwards married a Mr. Lumm and had several children.

HENRY AXTELL III, born in Plymouth county, Massachusetts, March 16, 1738. When about three years old his father moved to Morris county, New Jersey, where Henry continued to live the remainder of his life—as a farmer. He married twice. The first wife he married June 18, 1760, was Mary Beach. At this time he settled on a farm located about four miles west of Morristown and four miles east of Mendham. The farm remained in the possession of his descendants until the year 1841. Originally it was not a large farm but by repeated additions made by himself and his son Silas, it became a farm of more than 100 acres besides several out-lying lots. Nearly half of the homestead consisted of a farm that, at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War, belonged to a man who would not join the Patriots and was, therefore, ranked among the Tories. At the close of the war, the farm was confiscated by the Continental Government and sold, Henry Axtell being the purchaser. The family lived within the bounds of the Mendham Presbyterian congregation, and although it was four miles to the meeting house, they were regular church attendants.

Sometime in 1766 his wife died, leaving him with three small children, two girls and a boy. Thus situated it could not be expected he would remain a widower very long. Not far from him lived a young widow by the name of Mrs. Phebe Day, of good report and comely to look upon. Her maiden name was Condict, and wife of Silas Day who died March 31, 1763, leaving her childless—two infant children having been buried within two years before his death—a widow of only twenty-three. She had been a widow for more than three years when she was asked to become a mother to Henry's motherless little ones. On the 7th of January, 1767, they were married in Morristown, New Jersey, and lived together until April 6, 1818, when he died aged eighty years. He was buried in the Presbyterian churchyard at Mendham, where the headstone is still to be seen. His wife survived him for more than eleven years, dying at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Simeon Cory, near Morristown, New Jersey, July 6, 1829, aged eighty-nine. She was buried in the Presbyterian graveyard at Morristown.

The Old Homestead of the Mulfords, at Easthampton. Pl. 3: 1649

It has stood some two hundred and fifty years and bids fair to stand a few centuries longer. It is considered the show place of the town. The man opening the front door is Mr. Henry Mulford, one of the family and the keeper of the house.

THE MULFORD FAMILY—PART I

(From A. E. Kitchell's with some revisions)

Among the first settlers of Easthampton, Suffolk County, Long Island, who flocked from Salem and Lynn, Massachusetts, via Connecticut and the Sound were Judge John Mulford and his brother, William. They came from Salem.

JUDGE JOHN MULFORD, probably from Devonshire, England, where the name is often spelled Molford, settled in Southhampton, Long Island, going there via Connecticut, of which colony it was then a part. By the records of the town, May 29, 1643, "it was ordered that John Mulford shall have two acres of land on the plain." In 1648 he sold his property and in that or the following year was one of the nine persons who settled in Easthampton: his name appears many times in the Council Minutes of Connecticut, Vol. II, IV and VI. He was commissioned Judge in 1674, in attending to the town affairs, keeping peace with the Indians, representing the eastern town in Hartford, and afterwards in New York. He was one of their foremost men until his death in 1686.

He served as a captain in the Colonial Militia.

He went to England in 1716, appeared before a committee of the House of Lords, and by his pleading, the duty on whale oil was removed. A long sketch of his career is given in Hollister's History of Connecticut, in Thompson's Long Island and in Hedge's East Hampton.

THE MULFORD FAMILY

PART II

In the latter part of the seventeenth century, came to New Jersey from Easthampton, Long Island, Timothy Mulford with his brother Christopher and sister Esther. Their father was Timothy Mulford, second son of Matthew, the fourth son of Captain Samuel, who was the eldest son of Judge John Mulford, the original immigrant with his brother William from Maidstone, England, May 1643, to Easthampton, 1649. The two brothers settled in Hanover Neck, New Jersey, where they purchased a large tract of land extending from the Whippany River on one side to the Passiac on the other. They built for themselves large substantial houses, still in a good state of preservation, but no longer held by that family.

THE KITCHELL FAMILY

(From G. C. McCormick's)

The book, "Robert Kitchel and His Descendants" by H. D. Kitchell, published in 1879, says in regard to the spelling, "The rather prevalent form of the name is Kitchell but the single "l" is preferred, as it has warrant of much good usage along that line, is simpler, sufficient and better indicates the true pronunciation." Those, however, use the double "l" because their names got on the War Records that way at the beginning of the War and it was necessary for them to sign the double "l" which habit they followed ever since.

ROBERT KITCHEL, born in England 1604, died at Newark, New Jersey 1672; married Margaret Sheaffe at Rolvenden, Kent, England, July 21, 1632. She died at Greenwich, Connecticut in 1682. She was a daughter of Edmund Sheaffe, of Cranbrook, Kent, England (see Sheaffe family. Robert left England April 26, 1639, in company with a band of Puritan refugees led by Rev. Henry Whitfield. They arrived in the first vessel that anchored in the harbor of Quinnipiac, (now New Haven, Connecticut), while yet on shipboard, the company bound themselves by a "Plantation Covenant" to "sit down and join themselves together in one certain plantation." They settled at Guilford, in order to be outside the jurisdiction of the Connecticut colony, which they suspected of serious deflection from Puritan principles.

Robert Kitchel was a leader in the community. His name stands first among signatures to the "Plantation Covenant." There is evidence that he was a man of considerable estate. The Guilford settlers were generally men of character, culture and substance. Robert Kitchell was a representative from Guilford at New Haven in 1650, 1656, 1661, 1662 and 1663.

His wife was the daughter of Rev. Abraham Pierson, leader in the Newark settlement of 1666, who was born in Yorkshire, England, graduated from Trinity College in 1632, ordained in the Church of England at Newark, South Britain. Becoming profoundly Puritan, he led a company of devoted followers to New England in 1640. They settled first at Lynn, Massachusetts, then Southampton, Long Island, and in 1647 at Branford, Connecticut. While at Branford, he studied the Indian language and prepared a catechism and other books and was an apostle to them with spirit and power. He joined the Newark settlement in 1666 and was their first minister and continued with them as their pastor and counselor until his death in 1678.

His military organization was known as "Minute Men," whose duty it was to hold themselves in readiness to assemble at a moment's notice to repel an invasion from the British soldiers who were stationed in New York and make frequent raids into the adjacent counties of New Jersey. Although they made several attempts they never succeeded in invading Morris county.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The records therein were compiled from Harriet Cory Dickinson's Cory Family; Ephraim S. Axtell's Axtell Record; Mrs. Anna Eliza Kitchell's Mulford Family; George Chalmers McCormick's "Kitchel and Peck" and by correspondence. It is intended primarily as a family record for private distributions. Our suggestion is that blank pages be used, entering the births, marriages, achievements, incidents and deaths as they occur. In the years to come, it will be quite an assistance for a family historian to publish a genealogy with corrections and changes as records in old books may not be authenticated in many cases.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Mr. James Enos Cory is the compiler of a complete history of the Cory Family, which will shortly be published. Address: Rural Route No. 3, Shelby, Ohio..
